

2022 Call for Applications (Una Europa Chairs)

April 2022

Goals of the 2022 Call for Applications (Una Europa Chairs)

The overall aim of the Una Europa Seed Funding Initiative is to support the initiation of long-term collaborative activities among the academic community of the partner universities, including the preparation of joint innovative formats for education or research. We strongly encourage proposals that design formats of cooperation suitable to attract third party funding in the long run.

The specific goal of the 2022 call for applications is to consolidate academic collaboration in each of the five Una Europa Focus Areas, through the funding of one Una Europa Chair per Focus Area. The call promotes the mobility of academic staff across the Una Europa universities, in particular by piloting a fellowship scheme. The call is open to all academic disciplines.

Concept model for projects

The Una Europa Chair is a project presented by a research team consisting of senior academics of at least two partner universities and an appointed chair holder.

The research team, led by the project coordinator, prepares the proposal and is responsible for the realisation of the project. The project proposal for the Una Europa Chair outlines the vision and specific activities for consolidating academic collaboration in one of the Una Europa Focus Areas.

A chair holder is nominated as part of the application to carry out a fellowship that focuses on bringing expertise to the delivery of the defined project. The chair holder is a senior academic affiliated to one of the Una Europa universities who receives part of the grant to carry out a fellowship at the coordinating institution. The chairholder must be originally affiliated to another Una Europa university than the coordinating institution. The nomination of the chair holder is qualified in the application on the basis of their expertise.

Given the overall goal to consolidate academic collaboration in the Una Europa Focus Areas, the coordinator is encouraged to involve academics from more than two Una Europa universities to contribute to and benefit from the project.

Third parties may participate in the proposed activities; however, this will be at their own cost. Proposals that bring co-financing from other sources will be evaluated favourably under the impact criterion¹.

The five Una Europa Focus Areas eligible under this call for proposals are:

- Cultural Heritage
- Data Science and Artificial Intelligence

- European Studies
- One Health
- Sustainability

Expression of Interest

Each of the Una Europa Focus Areas is overseen by a Self-Steering Committee of interdisciplinary experts from across the Una Europa partner universities. Applicants have the option of sending an expression of interest to the Self-Steering Committee for the Focus Area of their project, in order to receive informal feedback on the content and suggestions of colleagues to involve from the partner universities. Please note that sending an expression of interest will in no way influence the evaluation process. The expression of interest form can be accessed here and should be sent latest by 1 July 2022.

Examples of activities

Contributing to the consolidation of academic collaboration can be carried out through e.g. delivering teaching and learning activities, research activities and/or, societal outreach. An indicative list of activities can be found below. Each activity must clearly demonstrate how it contributes to the consolidation of the selected Una Europa Focus Area.

- Preparation of joint modules or teaching units based on innovative teaching strategies
- Delivery of high-level lectures
- Organization of seminars and/or winter or summer schools
- Organization of PhD workshops or other joint doctoral activity
- Development of Una Europa research teams with a view to e.g. preparing joint proposals for external funding or joint publications
- Organization of congresses or conferences to disseminate Una Europa activity
- Engagement and communications activity towards the non-academic sector

These listed examples are only an indication of the type of activities that can be supported. The applicants are welcome to suggest other relevant activities that fall within the scope of the call, evaluation criteria and funding and financial procedures. All activities should be compliant with Una Europa principles on diversity, equality and inclusion. (See Annex 1 below)

The fellowship may be carried out on a part-time basis with a minimum commitment of 0.5 FTE (full-time equivalent). The duration of the fellowship may be carried out in one period or may be divided into several periods over the course of the project duration. The seed funding should not duplicate funding that is otherwise available.

Funding and financial procedures

The total budget for the 2022 call for applications is 180.000 euro, up to 36.000 euro per project. One project per Focus Area will receive funding.

The distribution of budget to successful projects will be carried out in the form of lump sums. The defined lump sum may entirely be used for the indicated purpose. Una Europa vzw does therefore not need any invoices or tickets, but rather the number of people who used the lump sum and proof that the travel or activity took place. If the coordinator decides to redefine the amount of the lump sums, the indicated amounts shall be the maximum and the new amounts should be clearly indicated in the budget.

The lump sums for the chairholder cover:

Annex 1 – Diversity and inclusion

Una Europa's vision on diversity and inclusion

Our vision is to shape Europe's future so that diversity and inclusion are understood jointly as a basic strength of our alliance to implement on our virtual European campus. Our aim is that diversity is underpinned by common values. These values are interdisciplinarity, internationalisation, innovation, interaction, inclusivity, impact and intersectionality. We believe in Una Europa's presentation that the member universities are "a mirror of humanity in all its diversity, reflecting cultures and languages, conventions and disruptions". One key point is to have a holistic and intersectional view of diversity. Inclusion should be also on focus, not just different dimensions. Inclusion should be highlighted as a tool of constant innovation and improvement, identifying barriers and providing attention to and optimization of resources, conditions and supports.

Description and scope

The concept of diversity acknowledges that there are multidimensional, intersecting differences between people, structured by social positions and cultural categories and identity variables, such as 'race'/ethnicity', citizenship, migration status, religion, gender (incl. gender identity), age, class, (dis)ability and health status, sexual orientation and family/relationship status. Intersectional approach enables to consider all social categories and forms of discrimination and to address practices and structures of inclusion and exclusion rather than putting particular identities in the forefront. Diversity considers not only social categories, but all forms of discrimination affecting the multiple axis of people's inbuilt (gender, age, capacities, sexual orientation, ethnic identity, socio-economic level, religious life stances etc.). Diversity addresses practices and structures of inclusion at whatever level the multiaxial essence of people may be threatened or discriminated.

Well-being and coexistence are essential goals to be fostered through all actions related to Diversity and Inclusion. Individual well-being gives people the freedom to be themselves as they are, displaying their abilities and strengths, but also their difficulties and differences. In this sense, inclusion is understood as based on the coexistence of quite a wide range of diversities, either temporal or long-lasting ones.
