

Una Europa Doctoral Programme in Cultural Heritage (Una-Her-Doc)

3. Fees, grants and universities application procedures

3. 1. Fees

While the registration to Una-Her-Doc Programme is free of charge, local fees and regulations apply for the enrolment to the Home and Host universities. The repartition of the fees between these two universities is defined in the bilateral co-supervision agreement.

Please contact the Home university about more information on this matter.

3. 2. Una-Her-Doc Grants

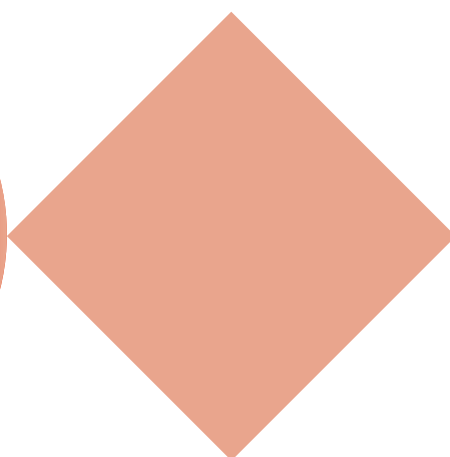

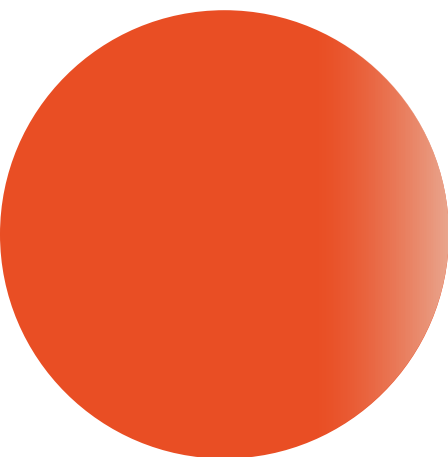

The programme does not offer grants. Some of the Universities grant offers exist, according to their local regulations. More information on this can be given by the supervisor and co-supervisor, or on the links below.

3. 3. Universities' grants and application procedures

Freie Universität Berlin

In Germany, there is no central funding institution but a rather rich landscape of different funding organisations. Please refer to the information on funding opportunities provided by Dahlem Research School, the central unit for early career researchers of Freie Universität Berlin. Please note that application and selection procedures take some time and that it is crucial to start the search and application process well in advance. For assistance and advice, please contact the program manager of the DRS in charge, Ms. Jeanette Rieger-Cowdry (nafoeg-stipendium@zuv.fu-berlin.de).

To apply for admission to the doctorate candidates will need some documents, among them the supervision agreement ("Betreuungszusage") signed by the academic advisor. In all cases a certified copy of the university diploma is required as well as a CV, a brief outline of the dissertation project (research question, methods, etc.), a workplan, proof of language proficiency either in German or in English, and other documents. Please check with the examinations office of the respective department (a list of all examination offices at FUB is provided here). The examinations office will check whether an applicant meets all formal requirements and, if so, will admit him or her. Admission and subsequently enrolment is always possible, there are no deadlines.

Alma Mater Studiorum – Università di Bologna

Every PhD student enrolled in a PhD Program at Alma Mater Studiorum – University of Bologna will be provided with a monthly scholarship for the whole duration of the course (3 years). The scholarship is subject to the payment of INPS social security contributions. The University is responsible for 2/3 of the amount of INPS social security contributions to be paid, while the PhD candidate is responsible for 1/3, which is automatically deducted from your scholarship payment. The PhD candidate benefits from all the protections and related rights. The scholarship amounts to 15,343.28 euro per year gross and to 1,278.61 euro per month gross. The scholarship, without the INPS contribution, amounts to 13,592.61 euro per year and to 1,132.72 euro per month.

International applicants can access to all the scholarships included in the Call for Applications. Some PhD Programmes provide scholarships addressed to international applicants. Please check the PhD Programme you are interested about.

At the present time no extra scholarships are available for Una-Her-Doc PhD students specifically.

University of Edinburgh

All of the University awards available are posted on a central Scholarships website for applicants to reference before applying - <https://www.ed.ac.uk/student-funding/postgraduate> and included in that page is also a Scholarships search function - <https://www.ed.ac.uk/student-funding/search-scholarships>

The College Of Arts, Humanities and Social Sciences offering includes the College Research Award, normally 1 to 2 awards per School. There is also a centrally funded Edinburgh Doctoral College Scholarships and each of our Schools has 1 award. All the other awards are based at School level and can vary based on the amount of funding available at School or through external donors. The other main routes of funding are the UKRI AHRC and ESRC studentships.

The majority of our University PhD awards require applicants to apply for a PhD and most will refer to the Degree Finder to access the PhD application system. Once applicants make this application they can access scholarship opportunities via the EUCLID Scholarships portal. This portal will ask them to select the award they are interested in, ask them to add a Scholarships personal statement and then submit the funding application. Schools then use all of this information to determine their award rankings and final offers. Decisions are communicated via the Scholarships portal. The entire process normally runs from November to April each year.

Helsingin Yliopisto

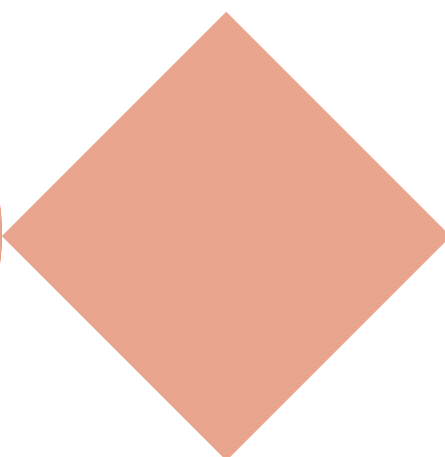

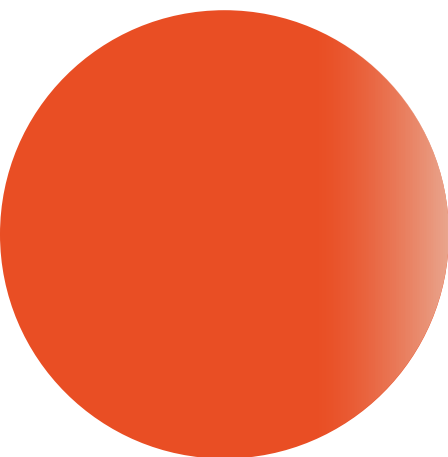

Students have to apply for study rights in the Doctoral Programme in History and Cultural Heritage (application periods in April and September). During the September call, they can also apply for a funded PhD position, or they can apply for a number of grants by Finnish foundations after they have been granted the study rights.

All information on the doctoral programme can be found here: Doctoral Programme in History and Cultural Heritage | University of Helsinki

More information on funding opportunities for Helsinki graduate students is available here: <https://www.helsinki.fi/en/research/doctoral-education/funding-your-doctoral-research>

Universidad Complutense de Madrid

At the UCM there is no specific scholarship program for PhD candidates enrolled in this program. Candidates must compete with doctoral candidates from the rest of the doctoral programs in the calls for public pre-doctoral contracts existing in Spain and at the UCM (<https://www.ucm.es/recursos-humanos-de-investigacion-contratos-predoctorales>).

For requirements, documentation and deadlines for applying to a doctorate at the UCM: <https://edotorado.ucm.es/admision>. The deadline for application as the Home university would be on September 20.
